Recruit Training 2009

For my recruit training I went to FT. Indiantown Gap and was a part of Charlie Company. I had a great time and made quite a few friends among the other recruits. Though at times a bit rough, we had it fairly easy Charlie company as our CC believed it was better to reward than punish. This worked very well for us and as a result we did not get punished often. Instead sometime we could mess around with our petty officers, although sometimes one recruit would take it too far and get us all in trouble. The worst part was the class room because the combination of being tired and the classes being kind of boring people would fall asleep. The part I liked most was when we all got to go into an Abrams tank. All in all boot camp was a great experience.
